Apache Newspaper

Economy: The Apache made money by trading and the best trading product was the jewelry that they made.

Technology: They would use hand made tools that were made from stone and an example would be a stone hatchet or a stone arrowhead.

Religious beliefs: There beliefs are that every inanimate object has a spirit, or has a spiritual force .

Trading patterns: The apache would trade in places like in Mexico, New Mexico,

Texas, Arkansas and Missouri. The apache would trade goods that were hand made
In the American Expansion the apache tribe their economy would change because trading routes had to change were moved to reservations and also had to make their jewelry out of different in different materials. Apache technology used different materials for tools and they used them in different ways. The Apache beliefs were effected a lot because their environment was changed, and they were moved from where they once were. The apache trading patterns were affected, because they were unable to trade with the same places, like New Mexico and Texas.
